Britons Polled Oppose Joining Common Market

LONDON Feb. 11 (AP) -British public opinion is swinging against joining the Common Market, according to the results of an opinion poll reported today.

The Opinion Research Center said 18 percent of those polled favor joining the market, compared with 61 percent in 1966, while 72 percent oppose membership compared with 20 percent in 1966. A sample of 500 voters was questioned following publication yesterday of a government white paper that attempted to assess the price of joining, and 57 percent of those polled said increased costs were the main reason for their opposition,

Sixty-seven percent wanted Britain to negotiate with the market to see what terms could be obtained before deciding on membership.

Guerrillas Defy Jordanian Ban; No Clash Seen

By Dana Adams Schmidt

BEIRUT, Feb. 11 (NYT).—Sources in Amman reported today that Palesunian commandos in the Jordanian capital were openly defying the government's ban on the carrying of weapons in public. However, authoritative sources both within the commando groups and the government said that they did not expect an immediate confrontation between the Palestinians and the Jordanians.

Truce With Nature?

Perhaps if President Nixon had promised the country less in the way of environmental reform, his message to Congress on the subject would seem more far-reaching than it does.

It includes some specific proposals that should produce early and welcome returns. notably the full expenditure this year of the funds now available for parks and recreational facilities. And the message suggests innovative plans for coming to grips in the less immediate future with the problem of disposing of the nation's rising mountain of rubbish.

But on the gravest question of all. the pollution of the country's air and water, the administration apparently is not yet committed to the kind of heroic effort, the ready outpouring of the national treasure, that is evoked by war-even the most unpopular

For waste-treatment plants to clean up the waters of America, Mr. Nixon proposes expenditures no higher than those of the present program-actually lower than those scheduled for the coming fiscal year and much less than half of those called for in legislation introduced by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

The President would have the federal government put up $4 billion over a period of four years-provided the states, with federal help in floating their bond issues. put up $6 billion in five years, to be matched by an equal sum from state and local governments.

Once standards and schedules are established, however, it is the President's laudable purpose to subject violators to fines of up to $10,000 a day, an approach that should make polluting the public waters a properly

The program's principal contribution to a cleaner atmosphere would be congressional authorization to the secretary of health, education and welfare to regulate the fuel composition for automobiles, plus intensive governmental research to help the motor industry come up with a "virtually pollutionfree automobile within five years." But the proposal seems short on teeth.

Among the dangers that we hope Mr. Nixon has merely left for future messages on the environment is oil pollution-whether by offshore drilling, by leakage from tankers at sea or from hot pipes laid over the frozen tundra of Alaska. Pollution from jet aircraft is another menace in need of detailed attention, not to mention the supersonic transport plane, which is the government's own extravagant investment in air pollution.

President Nixon deserves praise for giving an unprecedented emphasis to the environmental needs of the country. But if the country is really to "make peace with nature." as he wisely counsels, he will have to demand for the purpose, in far greater quantities than he has yet suggested, the chlorophyll of good green cash,

Arab Terrorism in Munich

The despicable terrorist attack in Munich on passengers of the Israeli airline discredits the Arab cause, just as did earlier attacks in other European cities. This latest crime against innocent international air travelers deserves universal condemnation, especially by responsible Arab leaders.

It is no excuse that such desperate acts cannot be wholly prevented until effective steps are taken to deal with the problem that lies at the root of this particularly reprehensible brand of extremism-the problem of frustrated Palestinian nationalism. The end result of Arab failure to move decisively against the instigators and perpetrators of these assaults on defenseless planes, crews and passengers almost surely will be a retaliatory cut-off of commercial air traffic to and from the Arab

'Arafat's Moscow Visit

The Middle Eastern conflict has acquired a new dimension with Yassir Arafat's welcome in Moscow. The Soviet Union has, by this act, granted de facto recognition to the revolutionary Palestinian organizations struggling against Israel. The aim of the Soviet operation is threefold: (1) to counter the Chinese; (2) to win third-world favors; (3) to embarrass Washington, Moscow wants to play a trick on the Americans, who never took a position toward the political problem posed by the Palestinian movements.

As for Arafat, he expects a triple benefit from his visit to Moscow: (1) to gain admission to the international scene: (2) to prevent a peaceful solution to the conflict; (3) to obtain weapons. While asking for additional fighting means, Arafat also is pursuing a political goal: to demonstrate that the organizations under his leadership are the only genuine representatives of the Palestinians. In so doing, he intends to disparage the current Israeli efforts to create a "moderate" Palestinian state having strong ties with the Jewish state,

Arab Attack in Munich

Next to the incomprehensibly stupid brutality of the Arab "guerrilla" actions against Israeli air passengers, it is above all their senselessness that repels us.

They are the consequence of that unbridled hate that on the Arab side partially blocks any possibility for a sensible settlement. The attackers above all damage the reputation of Arabs themselves, who are everywhere trying to seek support for their interests in the Middle East conflict.

EEC Cost to Britain

The crux of the matter is that an automatic application of all the present rules of the [European Economic Community's] common agricultural policy will place an unfair burden on Britain, which must therefore ask for its particular circumstances to be recognized. The French may still raise obstacles, but since they themselves have temporarily opted out of the strict application of the agricultural policy, because of the d. aluation of the franc. their argument will carry less weight.

Germany has also opted out, because of

Emerging Spain

Spain's steady emergence from international isolation and ostracism has gathered remarkable momentum since Gen. Franco designated Prince Juan Carlos as his successor and modernized his cabinet last year. No doubt some decrease in the harshness of the regime and prospects that this trend will continue, especially after the caudillo's departure, contribute to this. Immeasurably more important, however, are Spain's basic strategic importance—which is dramatically enhanced by the Middle East war and Russia's naval expansion—and its economic Negotiations for links between Spain and the Common Market are already in an advanced stage. It seems self-evident that full membership will follow soon, and that France will show favor to such a project and use its influence to remove the remaining scruples of the more puritan members. Spanish membership in NATO would be a logical corollary. This makes the Anglo-Spanish dispute over Gibraltar an ana-

Israeli Weapons

The Israelis know how to make their own weapons, and they have shown it. They are producing the world's most perfect machine gun (and selling it even to Germany). They have invented a flying bomb that is attracted by metals and corrects its aim. They have invented a rifle that can fire 600 shots a minute. We are sure that before long they will be producing a combat plane superior to those existing today . . . Under the circumstances, a total arms embargo by the four big powers would mean that within six months the Arabs would not have one plane, one tank or anything else, and the Israelis would be perfectly armed.

The U.S. Withdrawal

By Max Frankel

WASHINGTON.—Though guarded in their public comments. for troop reduction. the senior officials of the Nixon. administration are now confident that North Vietnam is either unwilling or unable to disrupt the Nixon plan to withdraw most American ground combat forces over the next 18 months.

In fact, the major question pending during Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird's current tour of the war zone is whether the rate of withdrawals can be increased from the current average of 12,000 a month.

Public optimism about the war is out of fashion in Washington. Mr. Nixon and his sides believe that the Johnson administration seriously undermined its credibility with a series of uncautious claims and predictions. They also feel that disturbing battlefield developments, such as the enemy Tet offensive two years ago, are more likely to injure support for the war effort if the public has been led to expect too much.

Policy makers here still regard the enemy forces as formidable and the forces of South Vietnam as vulnerable. They remain skeptical about the long-term ability of the Saigon government to cope with major military and political challenges and go out of their way to warn, as Mr. Nixon did ten days ago, that North Vietnam risks severe retaliation if her troops "take advantage" of the American withdrawals.

Administration officials do not, owever, expect the North Vietnamese to mount so severe a challenge as to make the continued gradual reduction of ground combat forces impossible. Some officials believe that Hanoi does not wish to impede the American withdrawal Mest are agreed that regardless of intent, Hanoi is. at present, not able to mount such an impeding challenge.

Concern Over Delta

There is concern here about the five or six North Vietnamese regiments that have moved into the Mekong delta region around Chau Doc, about 100 miles west of Saigon on the Cambodian border. Two unproven South Vietnamese divisions defend that area, and a well-planned offensive, which some officials here expect before the summer rains, could test them severely.

The principal motives for such an attack, the administration believes, would be the desire to give new hope to Viet Cong organizers in the delta villages, to under-mine Saigon's confidence in its forces and perhaps to encourage further political challenge of President Nguyan Van Thieu's

But the main American mission in such a battle would be air sup-port, especially through massive, and often indiscriminate, poundings by the giant B-52s. Even a mediocre South Vietnamese per- plans for their withdrawal are formance, officials say, is not yet firmly drawn.

Bonn Rebuilding Bridges to Arabs

By Dan Morgan

BONN.—A West German deci- the best example of Germany's Ossis is a project, begun a to Rgypt to repair two Upper Nile bridges damaged by Israeli mines in 1968 has underlined the Bonn government's shift toward a more neutral Middle East policy and the waning of its special relationship with Israeli. The cautious moves toward a more "balanced" policy have been most evident since the coming to power of the Socialist-Liberal govemment in Germany under Chancellor Willy Brandt, and officials here say that the bridge-fixing was also bridge-building with the Arab lands.

While stressing repeatedly that Bonn will do nothing "at the cost of Israel," Brandt has declared that his government desires better relations with "all" Arab lands. And officials say this is his way of suggesting closer engagement with Egypt, Syria, Algeria and Saudi Arabia, which severed relations with Bonn in 1965 after Germany took up diplomatic fies with

There are strong commercial interests involved, particularly because Libya now supplies about 43 percent of West Germany's crude oil needs. But also motivating the development is Bonn's concern over widening Soviet political influence in the Middle East and the speed with which most Western countries are being excluded from oilrich countries there.

Economic Bonds

For these reasons, the Brandt government is anxious to do all it can to preserve the contacts now available to it with Egypt, particuin the last two decades and left surprisingly intact after the polifical break

For its part, Egypt has hinted that the two countries could reestablish diplomatic relations. The new government here is rejuctant to go this far, however, because of the timing, so soon after Cairo's recognition last summer of Communist East Germany.

But the damaging of the Nile bridges and its aftermath provides north of the Aswan Dam) and Tamlay, were built at a cost of $7.5 million, with West Germany itself providing $3.4 million in low interest capital aid loans as part of its foreign aid program. though West Germany cut off for-eign aid to Egypt in February, 1965, after East German leader Walter Ulbricht visited Cairo, projects which had already been approved were allowed to go shead.

The bridges were then built, with German firms including Krupp doing most of the work. The work was well known to the Israelis, and the attack on them, on Oct. 31, 1968, was an embarrassment to Bonn.

More than a year later Bonn agreed to Expetian requests to include the bridge repairs, which had already been carried out, as part of its capital aid to Egypt.

cale with either garlic or shallots, it's hard to believe that Mr. Monassier wants nothing to do with them. What does send him into understandable rapture is his superb omelette aux truffes, a perfectly light omelet, its running heart stuffed with diced fresh truffles, topped with slices of yet more truffles and swimming in a sauce composed of chicken stock and port. The Chef

But this is giving too much credit to Mr. Monassier, for he has a wonderful chef, René *faccables, who has 42 years of experience to his credit. Mr. Maccabies is a small man who also has gray hair and who cedes nothing in intensity to Mr. Monassier.

They both worked at La Bourgogne when Mr. Monassier was associated with his brother Robert, and they have been together since Armand decided to set up his own restaurant.

The cook is certainly responsible for how the becassines sur canapé (snipe on toast) turn out, but it is Mr. Monassier who sets the tone of his restaurant. It is as Burgundian as he is -he has vineyards at Rully and Mercurey, just below the Côte de Beaune. Humbler Burgundian restaurants boast the same traditional dishes such as oeu/s en meurette (eggs poached in red wine) but few come anywhere near giving them the delicacy that Chez les Anges achieves. It can probably be safely added that none of them can come up with a better Rully than Mr. Moand generally tends with the loving care of a-worried mother.

This magnificent white wine is used in the sauces accom-panying, deliciously fresh soles, turbots or loups (Mediterranean sea bass, called bar when from the Atlantic) and naturally makes the perfect accompaniment to these dishes. It is equally good with the unbelievably delicate fresh joie gras.

There are other marvels in

Mr. Monassier's cellar. Despite strong Burgundian chauvinism, he is well stocked with good Bordeaux, but his face almost glows with pleasure when he can bring out the likes of a 1962 Beaune Clos des Fèves or 1961 Bonnes-Mares. Even his young 1966 Charmes-Chambertin has a beautiful aroma, provided that it is ordered and opened at the very beginning of the meal to allow the air to bring it out. Mr. Monassier is, in fact, so enamored of his wine-growing activities that he may give up his restaurant in a few years to devote full time to viticul-

Yale Works on the Translation Gap

By Alden Whitman

NEW YORK (NYT).-A longrange project to publish modern English translations of neglected but important French novels for the general reader has been undertaken by Prof. Henry Peyre, Sterling professor of French at Yale.

The first book in the series, Emile Zola's "The Sin of Father Mouret," has just been issued by Prentice-Hall for $9.95 in what it calls "The New Library of French Classics." Other volumes to be published this year are "Axel" by Villiers de l'Isle-Adam, "Béatrix" by Honoré de Balzac and "Le Vésuve" by Emmanuel Robles.

"So many great French novels are available to Americans either in out-of-date translations, or in wretched ones, that it seemed important to provide readers with something they can enjoy," the 69-year-old, Paris-born scholar said in an interview.

"Moreover," he went on, an astonishing number of excellent novels and short stories have never been translated at all - Prosper Mérimée's 'Ta-mango' and Victor Hugo's 'Bug Jargal,' for instance."

But what really distresses Dr. Peyre is that American professors and teachers of literature have circumscribed readers' knowledge of many French writers by stressing only one or two of their works.

Limited Knowledge

"Just think," he said, gesturing with both hands, "Balzac is largely known by Eugénie Grandet, 'Cousine Bette,' 'Père Goriot,' and Zola is associated almost entirely with 'Nana,' 'Germinal' and 'L'Assommoir.' It is as if they never wrote anything else."

Dr. Peyre said he was, initially at least, selecting books for translation that would give a broader picture of eminent writers, and thus enhance the appreciation of them.

At the same time, he continued, he wants to introduce authors not so widely known, such as Paul Bourget, whose "Cruelle Enigme" springs from an encounter with Marcel Proust; Crebillon fils, the eroticist, Barbey d'Aurevilly, who wrote "Un Prêtre Marié," and George Sand, whose "Lelia" is virtually unread these days.

Too Pedantie'

The most difficult problem he faces, Dr. Peyre remarked, is in getting good translations. "Most French is badly, terribly badly translated," he asserted. "It's just inaccurate or too pedantic.

Dr. Peyre said that he had searched out translators who could render the books in accurate yet lively English. "Fortunately, I have a lot of former students who are quite good PARIS, Feb. 11.—Hoarding gold and collecting stamps can be done in one single operation. Quite simply too with gold stamps.

These aren't just stamps with a gold finish but stamps with an actual gold content. If melted down, 47 of them will give you one ounce of solid gold, according to a Paris firm that makes them, the Société Pierre Mariotte. Strictly speaking, the gold stamp idea isn't new. Switzerland used gold powder in stampmaking as far back as 1862. Several countries, including Greece and the Netherlands, have also used gold appeal to draw attention to stamp issues. England out out, for the Tonga monarchy, 13 very pretty gold stamps in 1963. Now, in France, the Société Pierre Marlotte is making them for a group of African countries.

The stamps are not, as might he helieved, curiosity items. They are regular postal stamps to be used on letters, as ordinary stamps. Because of their price ($4 is minimum in the Mariotte production) they can be used for special occasions such as sending documents or heavy, transatiantic letters.

Former Nixon Law Firm Involved

rong, Fed Bank Finds Foreign Loan Use Raises U.S. Eyebrows

By Donald M. Rothberg WASHINGTON (AP).-A team of Wall Street corporate surgeons, including a former law parimer of President Nixon, recently performed a financial operation that has government officials rereading federal regulations and some members of Congress considering rewriting them. The team statched together a complex deal based on a $40 million Swiss bank loan. But the patient—New York-based omerate Liquidonics Industries which attempted to gobble up a defense contractor more than twice its size-lost $16 million in the process The unwilling takeover target was UMC Industries Inc. of St. Louis, Mo. When Liquidonics could not repay the Swiss loan it had obtained for the tender offer, UMC control passed to a Luxembourg firm—a fact that has brought a Pentagon review of UMC's clearance for work on assified defense contracts.

Few Winners The only clearcut winners in the deal appear to be the team that arranged the financing Most prominent among that group was Randolph H. Guth-rie, a senior partner in the Wall Street law firm that once included President Nixon and U.S. Attorney General John N. Mit-

The law firm says that, in its opinion, the Swiss bank loan did not violate federal margin requirements, although it would have with an American bank. Federal margin requirements severely limit the use of corrowed money for stock nurchases, UMC officials complained to the Securities and Exchange Commission that the Liquidonics loan violated the Examination Seen Mr. Guthrie said it was his impression that the SEC was examining the deal more with an eye to seeing if it should recommend new legislation to cover such transactions than to finding violations of existing regulations Mr. Guthrie's involvement in the deal was frequent and profitable. For example:

• Mr. Guthrie's law firm re-ers put Mr. Guthrie in as chairman of the UMC board. What disturbs some congress-men is that Liquidonics could go to Switzerland for a loan no American bank could make without violating U.S. law. Congressional sources said legislation is being drafted to curb such deals.

Swiss bank secrecy is another aspect disturbing to U.S. authorities. The loan is described as having come "from the ac-

Who are the others? The Banque de Paris does not say. And there is no way U.S. authorities can force disclosure. If the others turned out to be Americans who sent money to Europe to get around margin restrictions, officials said, they would be guilty of violating U.S.

Mr. Guthrie, however, said he believes that "the others" referred to European banks which took a share of the big

Another question is who got more than $3 million in placement fees on the loan.

According to documents on file with the SEC, Liquidonics borrowed $40 million at 85 percent. But after placement fee deduction, the New York firm actually received $36,870,250. U.S. authorities don't know who got the fees and cannot force the Banque de Paris to ton Banque de Paris to tell

Mr. Guthrie said he believes most of them went to the Banque de Paris.

Objections Raised During frantic efforts to avoid being swallowed, UMC ap-proached — unsuccessfully several other firms considered more desirable partners. Their big objection to Liquidonics's offer was that its annual in-terest costs on the loans to buy UMC stock would be greater than Liquidonics's net earn-

UMC does more than $15 million a year in defense work and had 1968 net earnings before taxes of $22 million. For a comparable period, Liquidonics net was $4.42 million.

Liquidonics obtained a 50.4 percent interest in UMC. It hoped to refinance its shortterm loss once it had control of UMC. It had agreed to repay $7 million by last Oct. 31 and the remaining $13 million by this Feb. 27. But the stock market declined and money became tight.

On Christmas Eve, Liquidonics sold its interest in UMC to Overseas International Corp., a subsidiary of the Banque de Paris, for $57.8 million—compared with the $74.4 million it had paid for the stock.

The 13 Liquidonics representatives on the UMC board of directors resigned. Among their replacements were Mr. Guthrie and H. Ridgely Bullock, another member of the law firm.

Mr. Guthrie said discussions are under way to determine what happens next. He acknowledged that a matter of immediate concern is UMC's defense contracts, which included production of radar and warheads and launchers, and guns, ammunition and grenades.

On the diagramed deal, North and South demonstrated the value of the Roman Two-Diamond bid, which has many adherents nowadays among the top players.

The opening bid of two dia monds showed a strong threesuited hand with at least 17 high-card points. North's first two bids were both artificial. asking South to describe his hand further.

Three hearts showed that South's short suit was the next ranking, in this case spades and four diamonds showed that the distribution was 1-4-4-4 with more than a minimum. Three no-trump would have shown the same hand but a minimum and four clubs and four hearts would have shown a spade void, minimum and

North suggested five diamonds as a final contract, knowing that his spade strength was largely wasted, but South per-severed to the slam on the strength of his good controls in aces and kings.

The contract was an excellent one and was not difficult to make. West led a trump, with the idea of cutting down South's ruffing possibilities, and East chose to hold up his ace. He could have taken the ace and led a second trump without affecting the results.

CHILDREN ARE CIVILIANS TOO

By Heinrich Böll. Translated from the German by Letia Vennenitz МсGтаю-НіЦ 190 рр. $5.95.

Reviewed by Paul West

This is the second portion of Mr. West's review of "Children Yesterday Are Civilians Too." he noted that in this collection of 26 Böll stories, each scenus complete, yet fills in a gap in one of the preceding ones, in sum giving the unsettling effect that though the war in which the characters are involved will end, the emotion cannot. The first portion ended with this paragraph:

Speaking as a survivor, but also sometimes as one who perished, Böll's narrator functions throughout as a compound ghost who, only weeks after he wrote the Thermopylae inscription on the blackboard ("Stranger, bear word to the Spartans we..."), is carried into school again wounded. back from his own "hot gates." and sees his handwriting still there. The only change is that he now has no arms, no right leg. He asks for milk and at once becomes one of the eightweek recruits who, in another story, wait for the weather to lift at an Odessa airfield and end up in town, bartering their personal effects for schnapps and reast pork on bread, maybe the last supper of all.

AND it is these innocents rendered even more naive by experience, whom Böll primes for his ceremonies of slaughter. Their minds on how the math master was always "tossing stupendous formulas onto the blackboard with something of a tightrope walker's absolute mastery," they conduct themselves like rejected extras from that baneful movie, Bridge," in which boys in their early teens find themselves defending a bridge in vain and getting in the way of the German retreat.

Such are Böll's children, civilians and nothing else; yet the book's title also implies that children are soldiers too, just as grownups are. It depends which word you emphasize; but, certainly, the entire book, through its sophisticated interplay of echoes and scattered cross-references, exposes the hokum in all role-playing and almost suggests that reality, socalled, amounts to nothing more than an established order we cannot change. Civilian or soldler, that is beside the point: What matters is that children grow up into men in whom the child never quite dies, and one of the most hideous things we know is an army of grown men in whom the child's gullibility and belligerence have been raised to their highest powers by ism has become bestial.

These are some of the thoughts Boll provokes in the head while the stomach recoils from horrors green canvas of the stretcher seen through the hole in a man's belly; teethscavengers among the corpses at the front at night; the yellow, white flow of brains from . head that only a second below was conversing—and these things undergo no mitigation from the presence in the stories of state lyrical moments as buttermin twists munched in a Russia snowstorm, love between trains a bottle of good cognee in the front lines, a train pulling in on time, "cheerfully pulling is steam between tall hears of corn and pungent to mate us with a far from out of date military dispossession a vacanty This life, I thought, says one young soldier, "is not my the work my life, but I'm no good at it." The sky hovers over head "like a soundless drigible about to graph." Ware my . about to crash." Wars and others might get under way. Boll is not a cheering write His youths are cannon foods his heroes how; and his servivors decamp to Sweden, when there are no ruins, or live hand to-mouth in squalid trains having knives flung at them; circuses, counting people at cross a bridge, rolling salivate butts into a Frankenstein de rette. One man is convicted h Orwellian Big Brothers of their ing "happy face" on the ami versary of the Leader's design while another, having sunt all into candles, finds no mand the needs them after all and less his entire caseful of samuel decorously lighted in the chart Böll's image of civilization a streetcar going too fast of which to stay is to less pri and off which to jump is at biguous (cowardice or rectar ness, he's not sure which). the back of our minds writes, "we meant to leave a baggage on the streetcar to the Lost and Found auction off as soon as we reached a terminus; but the terminus not come the fare went my up, the streetcar went fast and faste, the inspector more and more skentical are a highly suspect lot. any rough beast slouching to ward Bethlehem to be bond in Yeats's poem "The Sour Coming," Boll has no intell but he has rough bessts an whom he can make notice at all: "I don't know wi wrong with us. Maybe a professor will find out one and write an article about it. Meantime, the Green the belts.

The translation is un tional and, for the most p unexceptionable: Some of Vennewitz's English click "ominously miet" and "an hand gripped my heart—and merely childish; in the wi of these stories they are deal right uncivil.

NBA-ABA Secret Merger Pact Feared by Los Angeles Stars' GM

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11.-Jim Hardy, general manager of the ABA's Los Angeles Stars, said yesterday he thinks a secret merger has been set with the National Basketball Association and will be announced shortly. It will probably exclude 6 of the 11 current ABA franchises, including Washington and Los Angeles.

"If a merger weren't set, the NBA owners would never risk diluting their product at this time." said Hardy. He feels Indiana, Denver, Kentucky, Carolina and Dallas of the ABA will be invited Hardy said the NBA's decision to expand immediately to four more cities-Houston, Portland, Cleveland, Buffalo-was the signal a merger was set. He thinks it will be announced before next month's player draft.

"The league office has been strangely silent the last two weeks," Hardy said. "I'm suddenly on the outside and I think we're walking the plank."

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (NYT).—In the last five days, Joe Frazier has sparred 20 busy, sometimes brutal rounds. In the same span, Jimmy Ellis has sparred two casual rounds.

team bus after her second-place finish in the downhill.

Winner Anneroesli Zryd of Switzerland just winks.

The discrepancy in sparring has onlookers wondering about the preparedness of the gladiators for Monday's heavyweight title showdown at Madison Square Garden. Is Frazier working too hard or must he toil continually in order to attain proper condition? Is Elis being too casual, or has he reached his peak too soon?

Frazier went four rounds yesterday, two each with Billy (Moleman) Williams and Ray Anderson, his speediest sparring partners. He had been unimpressive on Monday in five rounds with the heavier Ken Norton and Charlie Polite, but against the swifter opponents, he again failed to punish his foes despite his aggressive style.

When the champion of six states, including New York, returned to his dressing room, he hopped onto the big marcon "Two hundred and five and a balf right on target," proclaimed Yancey Durham, his manager and trainer. "I don't know if Joe will box tomorrow. Maybe he will and maybe he won't." Ready Right Now

"I feel ready," Frazier said.
"It wouldn't make a difference to me if the fight was tomorrow. I'm ready for it now."

In a nearby dressing room at the Garden, Elis was putting on his white T-shirt and black tights. He would not spar, but he would shadow-box and hit the heavy bag and do calis-thenics. The ban on sparring had been decreed by his manager, Angelo Dundee. Dundee's fighter, of course, had been trained to a peak nearly eight weeks ago for a bout with Gregorio Peralta in cancelled abruptly.

"Jimmy was ready then," Dundee explained, "and when he went back into training in Florida on Jan. 5, he was al-ready in good shape."

Forget Shadow Boxing, Don Fullmer Warns Bogs

Utah, thinks Tom Bogs of Denmark made a big mistake by agreeing to meet him in a middleweight non-title ten-round bout tomorrow night.

Bogs, 25. European champion unbeaten in 52 contests, was at ringside when world champion Nino Benvenuti of Italy decisioned Fullmer in San Remo 13 months ago. He did not rate the American too much of a threat... "But Bogs only saw a mere shadow of my former self," said Fullmer, blaming a prefight case of the flu which left "The bout only proved that Benvenuti is better than half a Fullmer. I'll say I reached the peak of my form now, and the Dane should never have dragged me over here," said the Bogs, never knocked out in his pro career, will rely on his classic left-jabbing style against the 30-year-old Fullmer, a brawler who likes to carry the fight to his opponent. Victory could mean a crack at Benvenuti's crown.

According to Dundee, his-World Boxing Association champion was at peak form midway through last week. Now he is resting Ellis so that he will regain that peak for Monday's scheduled 15-round bout.

"All right, simmy," said
Dundee, winking at his cham-

Campbell said the stiff fine against the club was levied because Pittsburgh players "seemed to have had club approval" in leaving their bench. Smith was hit with a larger fine because he left his goal crease to take part the fifth time this season he has done so.

Degrees in Transport

portation is definitely one of the major problems of the next decade. The ideal solution would be faster, cleaner and safer transportation for everyone. But since this is impossible, other solutions must be found to make commuting worthwhile. ··· Air. Irwin Fei-

fer. who specialin manpower problems. has come up with an idea

Buchwald which certainly deserves consideration. Mr. Feifer says that as a commuter on the Long Island Rail Road he has been able to give hours of time to studying the transportation nightmare of the "70s.

On the basis of his own experionce he has applied a systems-analysis approach to commuting which, when boiled down to layman's language, can be put this way: "How can time now used to look at your watch be otherwise employed constructively and productively to further the welfare of the country?"

The Feifer Solution is to incorporate all railroads as universities and allow commuters to take courses for bonz fide college or graduate credits.

While the Long Island and Penn Central trains made their way slowly toward their destinations, each car would become a classroom where commuters could do their lessons, listen to quest lectures by experts who are stuck on the trains, and be

Hollywood Plans To Cut Cost of Making Movies

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11 (AP). In a move to restore Hollywood as the "movie capital of the world." labor and management joined yesterday in announcing major concessions aimed at cutting film production costs.

The development was made public at a news conference called by Mayor Sam Yorty. Present were actor Charlton Heston, president of the Screen Actors Guild, and Charles Bo-reu of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

Mr. Heston said contract modifications would do away with what he called costly feather-bedding practices. Other changes, he said, "mean nothing to the layman" but would mean a great deal to producers.

The actor said the proposed changes, subject to a referendum vote by Guild membership, were expected to receive favorable action and would go into effect at once.

A delay would no longer

mean an inconvenience, but would actually be credited to the student as an hour or two hours of classroom work.

In order not to confuse the courses, each car would spe-cialize in a different field of study and would be so marked on the outside. When buying your ticket at the gate you would specify what subject you would like to take for the month and the agent would issue you books at the same time he sold you a ticket.

The Feifer plan is not without incentives and subsidies. One of the major provisions of the plan is to get a grant from the federal office of education which would be used as an inducement for commuters to take the courses.

Each month a true-or-false test would be given by the conductor. Those who received 90 or over would be granted 2 $5.50 reduction on their commuter tickets for the following months. Those scoring 80 or above would get a $3.25 reduction, and those who passed with a 65 would not be given a money reduction, but would be assured a seat on the train for the next four weeks. The Feifer plan is not necessarily aimed just at people who take railroads (a subway educational plan where people can study while being delayed in tunnels is now being worked out), but could also be applied to people driving to work in the

Those signing up for credits would listen to lectures on the radio in the morning and evening rush hours and do their book studying at traffic bottlenecks and red lights.

The driver students would hand in their tests at toll booths and the toll collectors would grade them as they made change. Most people would not mind traffic delay, as it would give them more time to get their homework done.

The Feifer plan would provide for graduation exercises every six months. In the case of the railroads, the ceremonies would be held at the railroad stations, with the secretary of transportation handing out the Automobile college graduates would receive their diplomas from the license bureau, and license plate would indicate how many degrees the driver possessed.

The plan, if put into effect, would make Americans the most educated people in the world. It would also turn train delays and traffic jams into a profit. But more important, with everyone going to school, the generation gap could be-come a thing of the past.

Mrs. Pompidou, First Lady Without Politics

By Hebe Dorsey

DARIS, Feb. 11.-Mrs. Georges Pompidou will talk about anything-except politics. France's first lady was not being cagey, "but honestly," she said, "I'm not interested... I don't have l'esprit politique, which is just as well." Nor could she influence her husband. "He wouldn't

At the Elysée Palace it doesn't take long to see that there are two sides to presidential living. Downstairs, the noble, imposing heavily gilt and hush-hush salons. Upstairs, the cheerful relaxed and friendly world of Claude Pompidou. In the seven months that her husband has been in office, she has had time to do a thorough and very personal re-decorating job.

You change gear as soon as you enter a long, vibrant red hall with stark, gray Hartungs on the walls. The Pompidou have only four rooms that they can call their own. The salon, which is now finished, is a handsome blend of Louis XV and Louis XVI. The four windows are a salon with the salon windows and salon windows are salon with the salon windows and salon windows are salon windows. windows are draped with green silk. The rug is Savonnerie and all the furniture is, as would be, period best. But the paintings give the room a big lift. They're all strikingly modern.

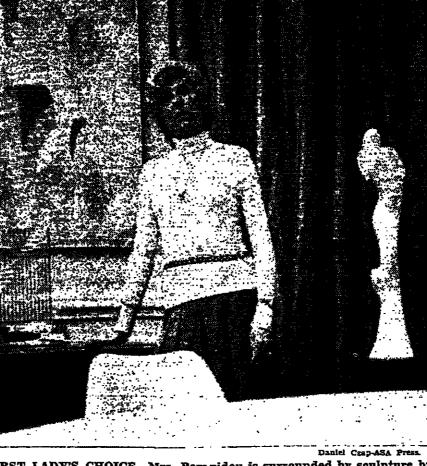

There's a Giacometti, two Poliakoffs and a Max Ernst over a welcoming, brown velvet settee. Two huge azaleas sit on the coffee tables, and there are green plants everywhere, including the bathroom. As Mrs. Pompidou explains: "I have an immense need for nature." On the mantelpiece is an unframed, color picture of the Pompidous' grandson—Thomas, 2 months old and chubby.

Thinking Aloud

A tall, well-built blonde. Mrs. Pompidou looks her best dressed as she was the other day for the first newspaper interview she has granted since becom-ing France's first lady. She was wearing a simple white sweater and skirt, She's not a fussy person and that goes for everything. It's not hard to see why she could never be in politics. Direct, to the point of being blunt, she has an artless, straightforward and rapid way of talking. Regardless of the subject, she speaks out and sometimes even thinks aloud.

Her office is still a shambles. It's going to be a combination dining room with a modern, white Knoll table. "We already dine here when we're by ourselves," she says. "It's much too solemn downstairs. Eventually, I'll have friends and family eating up here too." How does it feel to be France's first lady? She muses over that one. "I never think about it really. Being first, second or third-that has no meaning to me." What does she like best about it? Now, she warms up. "I'll tell you," she says.

"I love the impression that I can do things that I couldn't do otherwise. For instance, I'm very anxious to develop volunteer hospital aid, as you have in the United States. It's an idea I've had for a long time (her son is a doctor) but I didn't know how to go about it."

Mrs. Pompidou says that what she misses most is "a certain form of independence. Not that I'd do anything with it. But you know, that feeling of Tiens, I'd like to go to the movies to-day." She stops, smiles. "It's a little annoying," she says, "but it's not dra-

When people recognize her in the streets and say "Bonjour, Madame," "I get quite intimidated," she says. Her new functions haven't affected her wardrobe. "I've always worn classic clothes, you know. Maybe now I'm a little more classic, that's all. I couldn't wear wild clothes. People wouldn't understand. And it isn't necessary, now

Despite protocol, which, one feels. Mrs. Pompidou lives with but doesn't always abide by, she's managed to lead a fairly normal and what she calls "a very banal life." She spends a lot of time with her family. She has lunch once a week with her daughter-in-law and sees her grandson "chez nous"-which means her Quai de Béthune apartment. Every Sunday, all the family meets at the Pompidous' Orvilliers country house, called, no kid-"The White House." She doesn't friends—"no time"—but friends "often dine with us at the Elysee. That way, my husband can enjoy them too." She attributes her physical fitness to horseback riding. "I love it. I ride at least once a week at the Gardes Republicains' manège, near the De Saint-Louis." In the Lot (where they have a farm) "we live on horseback. My son rides a lot too but not my husband unfortunately. He has a bad back."

She has been to the United States once-"nine years ago. when my husband was a banker. I love New York Enormement. It has great beauty."

Ten Hats

The wardrobe she's taking to the United States for a week-long trip beginning Feb. 24 will come from her usual favorite designers — Chanel, Laroche, Dior, Cardin and Saint Laurent. She plans to get two midi coats-"I haven't any yet," and "quelle horreur" ten hats. "I never wear hats unless I have to. But after I wear a hat, I get dozens of letters from milliners thanking me. Then it's nice to know you've helped."

If left alone, she would like to cross the United States on a bus. But when asked whom she would like to meet, she drew a rare blank. "I really don't know." she said. "Jackie Kennedy, yes, that would interest me. She's of French origin and she was here nine years ago. She's an elegant woman. But I really don't know anybody there. Beg your pardon, I do know Mr. Ford."

Mrs. Pompidou may not know too much about the United States but her nieces "They're mad for doughnuts," she said. "Do you know where I could buy some?"

Is she happy to be France's first lady? There's a silence. "I'm neither happy, nor unhappy," she says. "I just try to do what's expected of me,"
